

How to Answer Exam Questions

So you've revised, you know everything there is to know about all your subjects. You sit down in the exam room, you open your paper, and there it is...

Q1. Evaluate the argument that global warming is causing severe weather changes in Britain.

You know all about global warming, you know all about weather changes in Britain... but what on Earth does 'evaluate' mean??

You must make sure that as well as revising your subjects, you know what the words in the questions mean. Remember that you don't get any marks for waffle and bluffing.

The following are all words that will appear in your exam questions:
